Persian colorings are everywhere. There are Persian cloths, Persian striped plushes (which show a very pretty changeant effect), and Persian millinery and dress trimmings. The colors are certainly odd, but attractive, and bonnets trimmed with a Persian garniture are chic.

Artists in gowning are now compeled to study with unusual care the lines of the human form divine. The so-called simple Directoire redingotes, for instance, and the stately Russian polonaises have no fripperies and falls of lace with which to cover a false move of the scissors, and the long straight second time. folds, which look easy enough to drape as one looks at the stylish models, are not so quickly adjusted and arranged as one might imagine. Pleasant Things to be Seen in the Winter Colony at Saranae. The natives of the Adirondacks are, as a class, a kindly and trustworthy PHYSICIAN people, thoroughly capable in their own lines of work, frank in speech and courteous in manner. They are not given to undue rapacity in their dealings with the throngs who annually invade their territory, and in their civility and honesty they certainly differ very pleasantly from most men whose fortune it is to live on the tourist, the sportsman or the invalid. Intelligence of the Crow.

How "fly" the average crow is, too.
Note sometime, when you are riding along in a train, how indifferent a crow is to the flying engine and cars. Note, too, how carelessly they will sit on some near-by tree or in some field as you drive along the highway. Now stip the horse and see how quickly their heads come up and how uneasy they get. It's ten to one that before the earriage has ceased rocking, and before you can take aim with a gun, every one of them are on the wing. Once two of us were riding along the road, and in a field were several crows. Close to the road was a high ledge around which the highway led, hiding us for a moment from the birds. Here I jumped out, while my companion drove right along at the usual gait. Waiting a moment, I crept up the hedge, and when I looked over carefully every crow was walking off and looking back. They did not see me, but they missed me from the team, and reasoned there was danger, and I did not get a shot.—N. Y. Graphice

The Most Rational Way of Preserving Health, Endurance and Vigor.

The English have, from time immemorial, held the lead in out-door sports, though in gymnastics the German and French have exceled them, and their ascendancy among nations is attributed by themselves and others, to make the warp and woof of all human thought. When I think of that rather was it is which have largely made and pictures, in infinite varieties of combination, are the warp and woof in limitant hought. The professional players, who are most benefited physically by it, are, to be sure, few in number in comparison with our sixty millions of population—though they constitute a small army in themselves. Still they furnish the occasion of the inhabitants of our larger cities, thereing out can wasses. larger cities turning out en masse as spectators and spending hours in the open air; besides which, every sor and description of amateur club is in duced to take the field, and eyen the boot-blacks and newsboys carry a ball in their pockets, and fill the interval between business with its use. Not less universal and beneficial is lawntennis (in spite of possible "tennis elbows")-an admirable game, pos sessing, with horsemanship, the advar tage of being equally well adapted to either sex. Lacrosse is transmitted to us from the Indians, and should be more generally played than it is. Another Canadian sport, tobogganing, is rapidly growing in popularity; and so, we trust, is snow-shoeing. Our colleges are the seat of boating, foot-ball, base-ball and general athletic contests to an extent that has given rise to standing joke on the subject. Pienics seldom complete without their athletic sports—running, leaping, wrestling, casting the stone, etc.—the girls and women, too, sometimes taking part. women, too, sometimes taking part.

The English "paper hunt" has been

New Hampshire last week. Capt. John Ericsson, the designer of the iron-clad Monitor, is dead at New York. Gabriel Warren was shot in a fight with robbers in Green county and perhaps fatally injured. A very perceptible earthquake shock was felt in Pennsylvania and Delaware Friday evening. Miss Mary Anderson is sick and has canceled her Washington engagement. Her trouble is prostration from overwork. The Courier-Journal says the colored people have been given the "Secretary of the Exterior" in President Governor Buckner was one of the speakers at the National Tariff Reform League Convention at Chicago a few days ago. President Harrison and four members of his Cabinet were born in Ohio. And yet there are other Ohio men who expect to get offices. King Milan, of Servia, has abdicaced in favor of his thirteen-year-old son, Prince Alexander, who was proclaimed King on the 7th inst. Mrs. Mary Booth, editor of Harper's Bazar, died last week, aged 40 years. She had for many years filled the place in which she died, the salary being $10,000 per annum.

The bill creating the new territory of Oklahoma failed to become a law before Congress adjourned, but it is almost certain to be taken up again and passed next winter.

Paducah is having some unpleasant experience with an unreliable correspondent, who sends out to the associated press sensational news items of a purely fictitious character. His latest canard was an account of the murder of the "Peebles family, on Duck river."

President Harrison has changed the order of holding receptions and instead of shaking hands as his predecessors have all done, he stands on the portico and bows to the people as they file by. This new departure is calling forth some rather vigorous criticisms of "Kid Glove Ben."

Miss Bertie Gardner was fatally injured by an accident at Louisville, and when it was discovered that her recovery was impossible her affianced husband, W. B. Wilson, was sent for and the couple were married, the bride being propped up in bed. Death followed in a few hours, occurring last Saturday morning. Saturd

There must be a new deal entirely when the next Democratic State ticket is made up. The Democratic party cannot afford to nominate men whose records will not bear the clos est scrutiny, and unfortunately there is at least one such now filling a State office. There may be still others, and the State had better be given the benefit of the doubt.

The Lyon county Gazette says: "Mr. Jim James has announced himself a candidate for representative of Lyon and Marshall counties." If this gentleman (who seems to have a superfluous e in his name) should get to the Legislature, he will find himself no stranger there, unless the next Legislature should be an improvement over former ones.

The Trigg county Telephone quote Capt. W. J. Stone as saying he would rather remain in Congress than be Governor of Kentucky. The KEN-TUCKIAN suggested Capt. Stone for Governor last fall, and the suggestion was received by the press of Western Kentucky with much favor. There is no man in this end of the State whose ability, moral character and personal integrity would come nearer filling the requirements that must be looked to in the selection of the next Democratic nominee for Governor, in order to command the united support of the party.

President Harrison never held any office of consequence excepting that of Senator, until he was elected to his present position. Of his Cabinet, Blaine and Windom have been Congressmen, Senators and Cabinet ministers. Rusk has also been Congressman, and both he and Proctor have been Governors; Noble and Tracey have been United States District Attorneys, and Tracey has bee a Judge also; Wanamaker and Miller never held office before. Harrison himself and Tracey, Rusk and Noble were soldiers during the war. Windom is a railroad man, Proctor is a sheep raiser, 'Tracey's hobby is race horses. They came to the city a year or two ago and undertook to compete with established houses on limited capital and have had a rough experience from the first. The credit business did the rest and finding themselves with an over-stock of winter goods and a pigeon-hole full of bad accounts, unable to raise money to replenish their stock for the spring trade, there was but one course for them to pur-sue. A good many road managers find it very convenient this season to have everything in their wives' names.

Whenever you meet the manager of a theatre, brace him for a pass. They live on air—they don't need money.

A hotel clerk can always tell a real actor, because he fills his match-box at the office. If the matches only ignite on the box, he takes the box. We know a manager who always tells his company that they will leave the city by railroad and city time as well. It keeps them busy attending their watches.

When there is any great calamity the theatrical people are always asked to play for the benefit of the relief committee. But when an actor dies, how many buy a ticket for the benefit of the relief committee. But when an actor dies, how many buy a ticket for the benefit of the relief committee. contented themselves with calling him a boaster. As yet they did not doubt advertisements for Dr. Sage's Catarrh his pretensions. Suddenly the town was electrified by the news that the Baron's wife had been shot while lying in her bed. It was the Baron who found her, but she was quite dead when he gave the alarm, and though he appeared to be frantic with grief, he could make no suggestions in regard to the possible murderer. All the evidence obtained by the police pointed to his own guilt, and he was accordingly arrested. Then there were found among his papers letters addressed to Baron Scharrenschild. and he confessed under pressure that this was his true name, and that he had assumed that of Munchausen. Although it was known that he had an interest it had not been being in his wife's death being to 190. interest in his wife's death, being greatly in need of her money, he would not acknowledge that as the reason, but declared that he had done the deed in attempting to shoot a pet dog which had as noyed him. Addie Cora Reed accomplished what to some would appear an utter impossibility. At 11 A. M. Feb. 13, she received word from Rudolph Aronson that Bertha Ricci, appearing at the Glove Theatre, Boson, Mass., with Miss Reed leave New York City on the 1 P. M. train and sing the role of Elsie Maynard at the evening performance? Without the slightest hesitancy she consented and left for Boston, where she arrived at 8 P. M. Everything was in readiness of her arrival, and at 8:25 she tripped upon the stage without a rehearsal, spoke every line of the dialogue, sang every bar of the music, and displayed not the slightest hie of mervousness or fatigue from the journey.

"In June, 1885 the Bitish ship Slivemore took fire and had to be abandoned when eight hundred miles north-east of the Seychelle Islands, Indian Ocean. The people took to boats and made for Seychelle Islands. The third day after leaving the vessel a cyclone came up, and no one believed that the boats would live through it. Before they left the ship, the boats had been supplied with oil for just such an emergency. Each boat got out a drag made of spars and oars lashed together, for what is known as a sea-anchor.
